

Suggested Questions for Interviewers:

Literacy in the Disciplines Project

- What do you do (career)?
- What is involved in your daily work? In what way do words matter in your job?
- What do you read or write as part of your job? What processes do you use?
- If you were to interview a candidate for a job, what demands for reading and writing (and perhaps discussion or speaking/listening) would you expect her/him to know that are specific to your type of work?
- What cognitive tasks are involved, such as synthesis? What are the demands of reading and writing for you in your job?
- What would you say to teachers about the language demands (reading, writing, discussion, etc.) of your particular job?

November 8, 2015

Thomas DeVere Wolsey and Diane Lapp